Egypt and South Africa, the inactivity of his present office and his inability to take part in the conduct of the war annoyed Mr. Churchill. When the threat of conscription came, it is said, he decided the moment had come for him to go to this front.

The following letters have passed between Premier Asquith and Mr. Churchill:

"When I left the Admiralty, five months ago, I accepted an office of few duties at your request, to take part in the work of the War Council and assist the new ministers with the knowledge of current operations, which I then possessed in a special degree. The counsels which I offered are upon record in the minutes of the Countite of Imperial Defence and in memoranda I circulated to the Cabinet, and I draw your attention at the present time to these.

Greece will range herself with the Allies and render all the military cooperation of which she is capable.

On the other hand, it is pointed out that in case the elections favor the King and the Skouloudis party, there is even less likelihood of Greek intervention than at present, when the majority of the nation has already emphatically expressed itself in favor of the Allies.

Joseph Reinach, widely known as a political writer, declares that the victims of the Ancona tragedy died as a result of "the unpunished Lusitania murder." President Wilson could not say, adds the writer, that he was not warned that the tragedy would be repeated "if it were not avenged."

"Is America going to swallow this fresh insult." M. Reinach continues, "and be satisfied first with explanations and then with deceifful promises, or is she going to demand from Austria expressions of regret, indennities and the punishment of the officers who committed the crime, and, taking up at the same time, the Lusitania question, insist on receiving the same satisfaction from Germany?

"We hope so, not in our own interests, for America's neutrality amply suffices, but in the interest of the great Republic, for her independence is at stake her independence already injurd and daily threatened with increasing boldness since for a whole year she would not have tolerated for an hour from a nation less rich and powerful."

This was the message: Brown of Scherk's propaganda have lately been in the direction of influencing army officers.

With a vote indorsing the policies of King Constantine, the Venizelos adherents assert that Parliamentary government would be only a farce, and they point out that such a victory would make possible a return to the old conditions of army tyranny, which were swept away in the revolt of 1910. The conditions existing then are still too fresh in the public mind to create any desire for their return.
